OFL allows you to use, learn, modify, and redefine fonts freely as long as they are not sold themselves. The fonts, including any derivative action, can be binded, embedded, redistributed and/or sold with any software provided that all reserved names are not used in derivative works. However, the fonts and derivatives cannot be published under any other type of license. The requirement for fonts to remain under this license does not apply to any document created using the fonts or their derivatives. Font software settings refer to the network of files published by copyright holders under this license and clearly mark this way. This may include source files, script building, and documentation. A reserved font name refers to any names specified in this way after copyright declarations. The original version refers to a collection of font software components as distributed by copyright holders. A modified version refers to any derivatives made by adding, deleting, or replacing -- in whole or in part -- to each component of the original version, by changing templates, or by running the font software for a new environment. An author refers to any designer, engineer, programmer, technical writer, or other person who has contributed to the font software. Permission and conditions are hereby granted, free of charge, to anyone who receives a copy of the font software, for use, study, copying, Embed, modify, redistribute, and sell altered and unscroteed copies of the font software, subject to the following conditions: 1) The font software and not any of its individual components, in original or custom versions, may not be sold themselves. 2) You may bind, redistribute and/or sell original or adapted versions of the Font Software, redistribute and/or sell it using any software, provided that each copy contains the above copyright notice and license. They can be included as standalone text files, human-readable headings, or the appropriate computer-read metadata fields within text or binaries as long as the user can easily display those fields. 3) No changed version of the font software may use the saved font names unless express written permission is granted by the appropriate copyright owner. This restriction applies only to the primary font name as shown to users. 4) The names of the copyright holders or authors of the font software will not be used to promote, approve or publish any changed version, except for approval of donations from copyright holders and authors or with express written permission. 5) The font software, which has been modified or not modified, must be distributed, in whole or in part, under this license, and the character will not be distributed under any other license. The requirement for fonts to remain under this license does not apply to any document created using the font software. Termination of this license becomes empty and void if any of the above conditions do not meet. In no event shall the copyright owner be liable for any claim, damages or other liability, including general, special, indirect, incidental or consequential damages, whether in the act of contract, torts or anything else arising out of the use or inability to use the physical software or other transactions in the Font Software. The license for this font is a SIL OFL license. This license does not allow us to redistribut derivative versions of the font without wholesale name changes in and out of the font. Until we think of a reasonable method of handing these over to you and complying with your license, you will need to use webfont generator yourself on these, renaming the fonts correctly. If you are the designer of this font, and this was an unintended consequence of using an OFL license, please contact us and give us permission to enable webfont conversions. Thank you!
